

Let's talk about Cultural heritage...

In our everyday life we are surrounded by a variety of elements:

- elements that come from the past and passed down from generation to generation
- elements created currently.

These elements constitute our cultural heritage.

Built environment as well as natural environment are also parts of our heritage.

Cultural heritage produces tangible and intangible representations.

Let's see some examples!

Cultural heritage is often an expression of the ways of living developed by a community. Moreover, it shapes us. It determines who we are and how we feel as individuals or as groups.

Cultural heritage can be forgotten or sometimes can be lost by choices people make (ie. wars). The best way to preserve cultural heritage is to share it with others.
